Upshaw officiated. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents.

Valentine Party at Loretto Academy. On Friday evening, February 11, the young ladies of the Academic Department entertained the members of their own class and the seventh and eighth grades at a Valentine party. Beautifully decorated invitations were issued, couched in appropriate rhyme. Needless to say, all were present but well repaid as a most delightful evening was spent. At the first sound of the school orchestra all marched to the recreation room that had been changed into a bower of beauty by the skillful fingers of the young ladies. Of course red was the dominating color. Everywhere the lights were shrouded in crimson thus throwing over the whole scene that inviting glow that charms and cheers. Several interesting games were indulged in and the lucky winners were rewarded with beautiful prizes. At the conclusion of the games all "tripped the light fantastic" until nine o'clock when refreshments were served consisting of fruit salad, chicken sandwiches, chocolate, ice cream, cake and candies. This over they again joined in the dreamy mazes of the waltz and not until the unusually late hour of ten thirty did the pupils bid good-night to their charming hostesses.

"Going Through Bisbee Shops I Noticed That--"

Nearly any style at all in collars seems to be the fashion, just so it's extreme.

Checks are rivaling stripes and plaids in favor.

Apron effects are good in the spring frocks.

Outing coats of a gay color is strongly favored for wear with white skirts. Smart top coats, handsome evening wraps, and motor coats are to be seen at the Phelps Dodge.

Mother of the little lads will be keenly interested in the new styles for the young son. Middy suits in checks with plaid collars and cuffs and the little double breasted suits made with the turned up cuff on the trousers, and made of tiny diamond checks are good with large collars and cuffs of white.

Steel ball buttons, and also ivory are used for trimming.

Sheer blouses are going to lead for all styles of suits and skirts.

The little girls are going to wear the dearest new bonnets hats that you can imagine.

Jet trimmings are noted on evening gowns.

Spring turbans show high mounts of ribbons and flowers.

Coat dresses are favored this spring. A real full skirt, rather short, a snug little blouse and an eccentric sleeve makes this smartest spring dress.

Fluffy sleeves and lace throws are weighted with elaborate tassels.

The new Chevalier collars and cuffs are noted on spring suits.

Some of the new afternoon gowns are trimmed with braid and metallic embroidery, while others are just as smart, self trimmed or with the aid of handsome buttons.

Blue and mustard shades are popular for the spring.

Pastel shades are being shown in wool suitings.

There is really very little change in the evening gowns for spring. The blouse is virtually the same, the bodice has little or no shape and the skirt varies only in the trimming or draping. Of course panniers are good and any old queer little drapery is good and the general effect and width of the skirts are much the same.

The New Shop on Main street has the most wonderful linens, madiera, Florentine and Luzon embroidery, as well as silk kimono and rugs.

Blue bird luncheon sets are very popular and many pretty ones are shown in cross-stitches and others have the bird printed on the linen.

Of all pretty favors Reynolds have some of the daintiest ones for a valentine party, place cards in fortunes, riddles, verses, and the decorations for tables are beautiful. The favors are lovely, some heart shaped Bon Bon or almond boxes, covered with red satin and to be filled and all sizes, too.

White calfskin boots are all the rage and laced way up high, with pretty flannel sport gowns or a white linen suit and a real foxy coat how pretty they look.

Frills again in the Vogue blouses.

The new coats are raised just a little above the waistline and the skirt of the jacket has a decided flare.

The suits are not all buttoning up real snug; some of them show the pretty new fancy shirtwaists.

Box pleats with and without the yoke and with belts are being shown in tailored suits.

For be it known that flowers and ribbon, or both, combined, climb high on crowns already high.

The new colorings are truly inspiring. Wonderful rose tints the blues found in Chinese art wares, the champagne shades, elusive and fascinating, such a wealth of variety, and all so rarely beautiful.

Spring styles hold so much of the charm and freshness of youth that every woman who sees them goes into ecstasies of delight over each successive one that appears.

A most wonderful popularity is predicted for suits.

However, designers may rack their brain for new designs, womankind returns to frills. They are becoming, always.

The immediate vogue for trimming of dull and brilliant hued leather is universal.

The shops are showing exquisite laces that give the clinging softness so desired in blouses, frocks and gown of the spring season.

When you see the new sport suits and the pretty jerseys, in all wearable colors, fashioned with long shawls, and some have the hoods on the coat. New York has taken a great fancy to them. You will, too.

The new blouses of Georgette crepe with frills across the front, not up and down.

Something Good.

Those who hate nasty medicine should try Chamberlain's Tablets for constipation. They are pleasant to take and their effect is so agreeable and so natural that you will not realize that it has been produced by a medicine. Obtainable everywhere.

FASHION HINTS from the FASHION CENTRES

By MAY MANTON

Valentine's day, January 14th, is a great day for the fashion world. It is a day when the most unusual and original costumes are worn. It is a day when the most beautiful and elaborate decorations are used. It is a day when the most charming and delightful parties are given. It is a day when the most beautiful and elaborate costumes are worn. It is a day when the most beautiful and elaborate decorations are used. It is a day when the most charming and delightful parties are given.

Stating is the sport of the winter and skating costumes are of course of interest. They have been discussed too generally to call for any extended mention, but a smart one seen at one of the leading hotels is perhaps worthy of discussion. The material is white velvet and the trimming is of electric seal or muskrat. Touches of brilliant color are found in the lining and facings of emerald green. The gown consists of a plain fitted bodice with a gathered skirt attached to it, and a wide band of fur edges the skirt. The sleeves are close fitting from the shoulders to a little below the elbows at which point they are met by flaring bell-shaped cuffs of the fur. There is a cape which is quite short in front but extends in a point below the waist line at the back. It is draped slightly over the shoulders. It is edged with a narrow band of fur and finished with a collar of the same. The lining of the cape, the facing of the sleeves and the facing of the skirt, all afford glimpses of color, and to complete the effect, there is worn with it a string of jade beads from which was attached a little gathered bag of the velvet and the fur. The hat is a close fitting turban with a band of fur as finish. All the details have taken up the skating idea. Ruffs are given over to the sport and while skating cannot be said to have supplanted dancing, it is its rival and whatever else society may lack, it enjoys exercise galore.

Capes are to make a feature of the spring fashions. This costume with its oddly-shaped little cape can be taken as indicative and there are new blouses and new gowns that give evidence of the same idea while the separate little cape wraps are constantly appearing in new and interesting forms.

From Paris we have received some advanced models for the separate blouse of the spring. A notable one shows cape-like sections over the shoulders with a plastron like front and back. The cape sections are double. They give the broad and drooping shoulder effect, and they are extremely graceful and pretty. The model is made in chambrase satin with trimming of velvet buttons and with a little embroidery in various colored silk floss. There is a tiny little chemise of fine white muslin with a flaring collar. Paris loves such dainty effects and the chemise is essentially a dainty garment. The sleeves may be taken as indicative too. They consist of moderately full puffs below the elbows where they are joined to deep caunter cuffs and these caunter cuffs face over the hands. In almost every known way the cape idea is apparent. Undoubtedly, the tiny little shoulder capes will be much used on street wraps and also the shoulder cape-like trimming for indoor gowns. Since the feature is apt to be a generally becoming one, it contributes to the general charms of spring, which is encouraging.

Ribbons are to make a feature too. In part the fact is due to shortage of other trimmings, in part it is due to the effect on the part of the designers to stimulate the use in behalf of the manufacturers, and in part it is due simply to the desire to find a new effect, but to whatever the fashion owes its inspiration, it is attractive and the ribbons are being well handled. A taffeta blouse shows ribbon encircling the collar and passing down in a band at each side of the front. A blouse of georgette crepe shows gro-grain ribbon arranged in strips over the front, five in number, each strip passing through a metal ring a few inches below the bust line. A number of gowns were being worn on the Riviera give evidence of the same idea, and the Riviera let it be added, while by no means in its normal condition, is a scene of not a little gaiety despite the war and its tragedies.

SMART FROCKS FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS

MOTHERS are always on the outlook for pretty new designs by which to make the dresses of the little girls. Here are two very charming ones. They are essentially different in character since one is adapted to parties and occasions of the sort, and the other, to simple every-day needs, but both are good, both are fashionable, both show new features.

The little party frock is made with two straight flounces, one of which is joined to a deep yoke and the other is arranged over it. Here, they have been plaited by machine but they can be gathered if preferred. In these days the machine plaiting is not very full and the gathered flounces always can be plaited by machine. The little bodice is arranged over a lining which holds it in place. It is a dainty little frock and a smart little frock, and made of the pale blue crepe de chine as shown here it is adapted to parties, but if it were made with a high neck and with long sleeves and gathered flounces, it would be adapted to the very simplest materials, so that one design serves a suggestion both for the party frock and for the every-day frock.

The embroidered flouncings are very pretty this season. The gathered flounces of one of these, with embroidery for the sleeves, the lower edges left loose and just a plain material for the bodice would make a very pretty frock, and would mean very little labor, for wherever you can use flouncing, you provide a finish and consequently reduce the amount of sewing.

The second little frock shows one of the essential features of the season in the fitted body portion with a full skirt. In the picture it is made from one of the new dotted muslins which are always charming for little girls' frocks, but you could use this design for any child-like material for lawn or for tulle, for cotton voile or for cotton crepe or for shillies and similar light materials. This skirt also is straight and consequently bordered materials could be used. Any long sleeves can be cut short with straight lower edges and they become available for substitutes.
